Japan TCGF Concludes an Agreement to Help the Tokyo Metropolitan Government Procure Emergency Support Goods in the Event of Disasters
Building a Cooperation System for Emergency Support Goods in Preparation against an Inland Earthquake in Tokyo

Aeon has been participating in Japan TCGF for the solution of problems commonly faced by companies in Japan in the noncompetitive areas. Japan TCGF was established in August 2011 led by companies belonging to the consumer goods distribution industry. In the joint project implemented by this organization, participants including Aeon have been making use of the lessons learned through the experiences of the Great East Japan Earthquake, Niigata-Chuetsu Earthquake and other disasters to formulate anti-disaster measures, while discussing the methods to cooperate with each other in the manufacture, distribution and sales of goods to continue providing people with lifeline services even in the event of earthquakes.

On the other hand, the Tokyo metropolitan government has been examining the measures to establish a goods reserve and transportation system in preparation against disasters. Believing it essential to cooperate with companies in the private sector to establish a smooth support goods supply system, the government concluded an agreement on the support of the procurement of goods in the event of disasters with Japan TCGF on March 11, 2013, as detailed below.

1. Purpose of the agreement	The agreement was concluded for the following purpose: In the event that a large disaster, such as an earthquake (hereinafter “a disaster”) happens or is likely to happen in Tokyo, 27 companies belonging to Japan TCGF will cooperate together to help the Tokyo metropolitan government procure emergency support goods upon request from the government, thereby supporting the lives of victims and helping the government implement disaster response and recovery measures.
2. Important points of the agreement	<ol style="list-style-type: none"> <li>(1) The agreement is intended to help the Tokyo metropolitan government build up an emergency goods procurement system so that it can respond to various needs of victims in a prompt manner in the event of a disaster.
